

Batten down the patches

By MC3 Joey Morgon

The Polidoro Company, a company from Italy, has returned to USS Theodore Roosevelt to sell cruise jackets and custom-made Italian suits to the Sailors of USS Theodore Roosevelt (CVN 71). While aboard, TR Sailors will be able to customize and special-order cruise jackets with a variety of patches and embroidery, to a range of suits from varying fabrics and styles. Below, Sailors browse through the Polidoro Company's vending tables, located on the aft mess decks.

- 1.) Hospital Corpsman 3rd Class Ervin Gains purchases a cruise jacket from the Polidoro Company vendors aboard USS Theodore Roosevelt (CVN 71).
- 2.) Sailors aboard TR browse through the various wares offered by the Polidoro Company.
- 3.) Mr. Pino, a representative of the Polidoro Company, displays a cruise jacket to customers.
- 4.) Ship's Serviceman 3rd Class Laura Owen considers purchasing a tiger patch from the Polidoro Company.
- 5.) Aviation Structural Mechanic 3rd Class (SW) Christopher Thomas browses through the various patches offered by the Polidoro Company.
